

Fraud Report

January 2002

Lueker Claims New Girlfriend; Truth Revealed!

Unassociated Press

Recent claims by John Lueker have been refuted by Worldwide Photo Retouching Labs, a leading expert in forged photographs and digital images. "You can tell right off by the ape-hand. Kelly Brook's hands are not that big" said Brian Pixster, director of the WPRL. Ken Bitwise, Chief Pixelated Media Officer, said the picture was quite clean but still had mistakes: "What's her hand doing to the windshield? Nobody sits like that." According to sources close to Lueker, the Jeep in the photograph is Lueker's Jeep. "He just got it a few weeks ago," said Greg Pons, a coworker. According to Pons, Lueker has never been seen with Brook. Kelly Brook was not available for comment.

Animal Tracking Leads to Suspicion

Animal Legion

Recent witnesses of Bret Harris' uncanny animal tracking ability have led observers to say "whoa there!" Some animal advocates are saying, "What if he is tracking my cat? Is he sick or something?" Harris issued a statement Wednesday denying any wrongdoing. "We need to study wildlife to preserve our rich planet. You are just being silly." Local law enforcement says nothing can be done unless Harris does something wrong. "There is no reason to be concerned at this time."

Inside:

- Fred acknowledges writing bugs
- Lore admits C++ has problems
- Love discusses secrets of micro-management
- Joe's Java
- VaL tells why the uppercase "L"
- Csontos backpedals on QA statement; admits we don't need it
- How to pug into UT

Altman Out of Chocolate

Cocoa Wire

Once again, Altman is out of chocolate. "Trips to Europe are cheap for me, so I don't mind supplying the goods," said Altman last week. Anonymous sources say the chocolate is good, but sometimes Altman keeps talking and they can't leave the office fast enough. "You really have to think...is it worth it?" said an unidentified coworker. Authorities say they did not know about the chocolate imports. "We're not sure if this is legal" say customs officers at Dulles Airport. "We don't usually sniff out chocolate, but these quantities are going to raise some eyebrows upstairs if we don't do something."

See next month's special expos é: QA Fred